Arab ministers to meet July 16

TUNIS (R) - The Arab League has proposed July 16 as the date for an emergency meeting of foreign ministers on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and the U.S. decision to suspend talks with the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO). The meeting was originally set for last Wednesday but it was postponed after not enough ministers were able to attend. PLO Chairman Yassar Arafat told reporters Saturday night they would now meet on July 16. Arab diplomatic sources said they doubted that any of the 21 members would object to the ### cat Stevens refused in June; Sharon gets new power entry to Israel

TEL AVIV (R) - Former pop star Cat Stevens, who took the name Yousef Islam when he converted to Islam, was refused entry by Israeli authorities Sunday. Airport officials said they turned away Islam, 41, who was accompanied by his eight-year-old son, for his alleged preachings against Israel. Stevens had dozens of hit records in the 1970s.

Gorbachev restores citizenship to 3 emigre writers

MOSCOW (R) — Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has restored Soviet citizenship to three leading writers expelled in the 1970s for works which criticised the country and its policies. TASS news agency said Gorbachev issued a presidential decree restoring citizenship to Alexander Zinovyev, Zhores Medvedev, and Vladimir Maximov all expelled during the rule of former leader Leonid Brezhnev. The decree issued here today says this has been done to eliminate the injustice done to them and has been prompted by humane considerations and goodwill," the

israel releases Arab poet

HAIFA (AP) — An Israeli Arab poet charged with identifying with a "terrorist" organisation was released from house arrest Sunday by district court judge here. Shafik Habib, a 49-year-old accountant known for his "political poetry," was placed under house arrest in mid-June after police said his poems could incite violence. Publication of Habib's poems was also banned. The move sparked protests by Arab legislators, and the Palestinian Israeli Writers' Union.'

Israeli exploitation of Arab water blocks peace — Badran

Prime minister defends economic policy against criticism, denies 'deal' with Islamic Bloc

By Salameh Ne'matt Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN — Jordan warned Sunday that Israel's illegal use of water from the occupied territories, the Jordan and Litani rivers and its obstruction of Jordanian attempts to get financing for Al Wihda Dam could destroy all chances for peace in the region.

Prime Minister Mudar Badran said Israel had interferred with the World Bank to block the financing of the Al Wihda Dam project by asserting that it had rights over the Yarmouk River

"Israel has been able to interfere with the World Bank and stop the extension of loans for the project," Badran said in an interview with the Jordan Times and Al Hayat newspapers. "Israel is claimining that it has rights in the (Yarmouk) River waters and it insists on having a share," the prime minister added.

He said Jordan would seek financing from other sources to go ahead with the project which it had already launched in cooperation with Syria. The project, which was expected to cost $450 million, was designed to provide a reserve of 120 million cubic

Jordan is going through a clear economic plan. The exchange rate has been stabilised and there are no more price fluctuations the way, they were before. Exports have made great leaps and investments have started coming back. All this is an integral part of the economic policy and not a superficial action or a reaction to a specific situation. But the economy needs a long time before it can recover fully. ## Israel frees prisoners on eve of Eid

MEGIDDO (AP) -- Israel began releasing dozens of Palestinian prisoners from detention centres Sunday to mark the upcoming Muslim holiday of Eid Al

At this prison in northern Israel about a dozen youthful Arabs left the prison in the early afternoon. Many of the prisoners flashed "V for victory" signs from the bus windows.

The army would not say how many Palestinians would be freed Sunday, but a Defence Ministry official said earlier that hundreds would be released from facilities in the Gaza Strip, the Ketziot detention camp and the Megiddo

Freeing Arab prisoners is traditional on religious holidays. But the timing of the release raised speculation it may be related to a report that a Western hostage may be freed in Lebanon or to Israel's efforts to make peace with Palestinians.

In the report from Tehran, the Sunday correspondent of London quoted Sayed Hossein Mosavian. an Iranian Foreign Ministry official, as saying a Western hostage could be freed soon without any concession expected by the West However, Mosavian also told the newspaper that the United States and other Western nations should exert influence on Israel to free its many Lebanese Shi'ite

It was not clear if Israel's Lebanese Christian militia allies in Lebanon also intended to free prisoners for the Muslim holiday which starts Monday. The Israelifinanced South Lebanon Army militia holds hundreds of Shi'ite prisoners at the Al Khiam detention camp in southern Lebanon.

While Israel also holds Lebanese Shi'ites within its own territory, it appeared most of those being released Sunday were Palestinians arrested in the 30month uprising against Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

By midafternoon Sunday, it appeared more than 100 Palestinian inmates had been freed. Israel Army Radio reported that 60 prisoners were released from prison camps in the occupied Gaza Strip. Television crews said a busload of about 40 inmates also left the Ketziot Prison

Naveh said Friday that Israel would release hundreds of prisoners. He added that the prisoners being freed had served the majority of a first sentence for participating in riots and included juveniles under the age of 14.

According to army statistics, Israel held 10,430 Arab security prisoners as of Friday.

Of these, 4,341 have been convicted and 1,038 are being held under emergency regulations allowing suspects to be detained up to a year without charge or trial. The others are awaiting charges or trial.

Meanwhile speculation that a hostage release might be upcoming was heightened by a report in the Israeli weekly "Jerusalem" which said a prisoner exchange was expected between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO).

Israeli MP: New West Bank homes will lure

TEL AVIV (R) — A leftist Israeli legislator said Sunday the government was building almost 600 new homes in the occupied West Bank which would encourage Soviet Jewish immigrants to Housing Minister Ariel Sharon said last week the immigrants would not be sent to live in the West Bank or Gaza Strip. The announcement followed threats by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to reconsider his freer emigration policy.

The cabinet Sunday granted Sharon's request for emergency powers to build immigrant housing inside Israel's pre-1967 borders. Outside the meeting, 1,000 builders protested at his plan to import prefabricated homes.

Yossi Sarid, an opposition legislator, told newspapers the Housing Ministry began building 583 bomes in the West Bank between January and May this year which would attract immigrants with lower prices and availability.

"Sharon saying we won't send immigrants to the territories is a half truth," said Moshe Horowitz, spokesman for Sarid's party, the Citizen's Rights Move-Nouri said virtually all of the dead and injured had been recovered from the rubble in the first 72 hours after the earthquake early in the morning June 21, but he said there might still be a few unrecovered bodies in isolated cases. The massive quake measured between 7.3 and 7.7 on the open-ended Richter Scale.

He said there might have been some cases of crime after the earthquake because many of the law-enforcement officers were lost, but he said the national government had sent in Revolutionary Guards and Komitchs, or neighborhood police, and that crime was not a problem.

Ethiopia begins mobilisation

ADIS ABABA (AP) - A recently ordered general mobilisation against northern Ethiopia rebels began with retired soldiers and police re-enlisting, state radio said Sunday. However, Radio Addis Ababa provided no figures, reporting only "retired men turning out in large mumbers in Addis Ababa and its outskirts" beginning

"Hundreds of other retired patriotic men have been reporting at registration centres in various provinces," the broadcast

The Shengo, or parliament, ordered the mobilisation on Jun. 24 against the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Democratic Front (EPDRF) and the Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF) battling government troops in northern provinces of Tigre and

But the EPDRF denounced the mobilisation Saturday in a clandestine broadcast monitored in Kenya's capital, Nairobi.

The broadcast also repeated an earlier rebel ceasefire proposal, saying it could be implemented in a week if President Mengistu Haile Mariam's government were replaced with an interim one.

The rebels blamed the president for hindering the implementation of a ceasefire and instead engaging in "massive preparations" to continue the civil

"If the Dergue (government) sticks to its guns of bringing the country and its peoples more bloodshed by rejecting the con-tinuing peace calls, then the EPDRF will have no alternative but to destroy the Dergue," the broadcast said.

The EPDRF is a combined force of the Tigre People's Liberation Front and the Ethiopian People's Democratic Movement, a much smaller group.

The Tigreans, fighting a 15-year-old war to oust Mengistu and establish a hardline Marxist government, control their home province of Tigre and recently hit targets 100 kilometres north of Addis Ababa.

On Thursday, the government said it was possible to consider the ceasefire proposal provided the Tigreans stopped supporting the Eritreans in a 29-year-old war for the independence of Eritrea. But the Tigreans would have

Tourism workshop to tackle services sectors

AMMAN (J.T.) - A three-day tourism marketing workshop is scheduled to open in Amman on Sunday, 22 July. The workshop will concentrate on strengthening and improving the services sectors in Jordan which support tourism. Participating in the workshop will be representatives from the Kingdom's hotels, travel agents, tour operators, restaurants and transportation services — international and domestic, land and air.

The workshop is being sponsored by the Private Services Development Project (PSDP), and is based on a professional training programme "Marketing & Prom-otion of Tourism" which is presented twice yearly in New York city by the World Trade Institute (WTI). The workshop will serve as a means to "train trainers" in Jordan.

Happy Eid

TODAY Jordan, along with the Arab and Islamic worlds, celebrates Eid Al Adha. This Eid, as any other holy occasion in Islam, is a time for soul searching and positive thinking. In fact in the pilgrimage to Mecca which precedes the Eid Muslims are oriented towards meditation and spiritualism. For Musius to includge in mundane and material issues and rejoice in the feast in an incomplete manner is no true reflection of this holy occasion.

Deviation from the true spirit of such holy days casts heavy shadows on the real meanings of the Eid and paints it with colours that are alien to Islam.

The pilgrimage to Mecca is an occasion to rekindle our spiritual ties with our creator and should strengthen our compassion for fellow men and women, specially the less fortunate among them. Such an occasion should remind us of our duty and obligations towards the needy not only in the literal sense but also in the figurative sense. It goes without saving that the dimensions and scope of such attitudes and perspectives are not confined to the individual level, but include the collective level as well.

Inter-Arab and inter-Islamic relations come within the perview of this true spirit and meaning of Eid Al Adha which we enjoy today. Nothing could enhance the message of these happy days and fulfil their spiritual objectives more than to see the Arab and Islamic countries enjoying good brotherly relations devoid of ill feeling and animosity. We, therefore, are both confident and hopeful that we can help ourselves and attain the degree of fraternity and goodwill which is asked of us.

We shall congratulate ourselves and each other on the feast only to the extent that we succeed in fulfilling the spiritual message of the occasion. There are signs, albeit faint ones, that we now realise what we should do and acknowledge more than ever, our shortcomings. In this sense we have a right to feel optimistic with regard to the

ARABIC PRESS COMMENTARIES

Al Ra'i Arabic daily Sunday described Shamir's message to U.S. President Bush as a defiance to the European Community as EC statement issued in Dublin last Tuesday. It said that Shamir is trying to force the United States to take a stand that would prevent the EC from having any say in the Middle East question and to enlist the U.S. administration's assistance in imposing total hegemony on the Arab World. It is no secret that most nations including the EC now believe that the Middle East is facing the danger of war as a result of Israel's practices and intransigence, and Shamir's message was clearly intended to secure the United States full backing for Israel's adventures in this region, the paper said. The EC statement clearly reflected the European countries' concern over the dangerous situation in the region at large, and over the plight of the Palestinian people in particular, continued the paper. It said for this reason Israel is now striving to deny Europe any role in Middle Eastern affairs by trying to place the United States firmly in its own camp. Needless to say that any American move to further consolidate Israel's aggressive stand is to be considered as a dangerous development which would transform the United States as a full partner to Israel in the open aggression against the Arab 1/21ion.

Warnings by a number of Arab states of an imminent Israeli aggression on the Arab Nation are justified in view of the emergence in Israel of an aggression-oriented government of extremists bent on pursuing policies that would eventually trigger a new conflict in the region, says Mahmond Al Rimawi Sunday. Jordan, Iraq. Libya and the PLO are justified in issuing the warnings since they are the most likely parties to be exposed to such Israeli aggression because of their continued support to the uprising in the occupied Arab territories, the writer notes. What prompts observers to believe that war is inevitable is a belief on the part of the U.S.-Israeli alliance that the Jewish state should muster sufficient power to make it the dominant force in the Arab region, and that no Arab country should be able to acquire any military strength that might endanger Israel's security at any time, the writer continues. The United States for its part has been providing all support and aid to Israel, enabling it to maintain its occupation of Southern Lebanon, its usurpation of Palestinian land its approximately and the page of t land, its aggression on Baghdad and Tunis; and has been giving Israel full backing at the U.N. Security Council, the writer notes. But he says at present Israel is no doubt preparing for a major multi-purpose adventure that would result in new realities and one which it hopes would force the Arabs to accept its terms. Only by reviving the Arab Defence Pact which should essentially include Egypt, says Rimawi, can the Arab Nation ward off this looming danger and ensure guarantees safeguarding their national Sawt Al Shaab Arabic daily made a mockery of Arab moderate policies which had been based on the assumption that Washington would bring peace to the Middle East on a silver platter. The paper said that since 1967, Washington has been exerting all its efforts to consolidate Israel's hold over the occupied Arab territories and to form the Arab territories and the Arab territo territories and to force the Arabs to offer further concessions to the Jewish state. The United States does not want an international peace conference which it feels is not in Israel's interest not does it want to have a solution for the Arab-Israeli conflict which would put an end to Israel's dreams, the paper noted. It said that the United States-Israeli alliance aims to ensure more lands in Palestine for the settlement of 1. Palestine for the settlement of Jewish immigrants, and wants to ensure the existence of Issuel Issue immigrants, and wants to ensure the existence of Israel at the expense of the Arab Nation.

Waltzing Matilda or is it Bush?

"IT is not interesting to watch the U.S. take two or three steps backwards every time it dares to make one step forward. This waltz policy towards the Arab-Israeli conflict is certainly not becoming of a superpower of the stature of the U.S. This zig zaging in position happened just too many times to remain amusing. It is disturbing to the parties involved in the Middle East conflict just as it is, and should be, disturbing to the American people. What exacerbated this decades long U.S. policy are three principle features of this incredible U.S. perspective.

Few months ago, the Arab World got infuriated when the U.S. Senate, under the prodding of U.S. Senator Robert Dole, adopted a resolution proclaiming Jerusalem a united city under Israeli jurisdiction. Then a miracle happened, or should we say a mirage, when the senator reversed himself on that infamous resolution and told Arabs and Israelis alike, during a visit to the Middle East, that the resolution is wrong, offered his apologies for its adoption and promised to repeal it as soon as he sets foot in the U.S. capital. We all know what happened to Dole's promise to rectify the mischievous error committed by him and his colleagues. His words simply got drowned in the U.S. domestic politics where the Jewish lobby proved again and again that it has the U.S. Congress by the balls!!

Then came U.S. President George Bush's turn to prove the obvious and the invincibility of the Jewish lobby machine. That occurred when he slipped and followed his conscience on the issue of Jewish immigration and the unacceptable move to resettle the immigrants in East Jerusalem. All hell and furor broke loose at the thought of the U.S. president breaking away from long-held traditions and in less than 24 hours the president was recanting his own words and, intentions to suit the interests of his Jewish constituency.

Few days ago U.S. Secretary of State James Baker rebelled temporarily from customary U.S. policy when he pointed his finger at Tel Aviv and described it as the stumbling block in the path of the socalled peace process. His offer of the White House telephone number to Shamir to call when he is ready to talk serious peace business was arrogantly and defiantly rebuffed by Tel Aviv which hastened to offer Shamir's number when Washington is ready to accept his terms of for peace in the cept when the American people rebel against this tyrandy and start taking effective measures to put an end to it. Till that point in time one should not be pinning hope on Washington to rescue the peace process from imminent demise. But for that to happen, the Arab players need to amend their ways towards themselves and towards the U.S. and its people. There are many ways available to the Arab side to adopt towards this purpose and goal. This will be the subject of future writings.

Who gets how much?

By Heba Saleh

Despite repeated denials from both Egyptian and Ethiopian officials, rumours persist in the Egyptian press that the Ethiopians are building dams on the Blue Nile with the help of Israel, and that as a result less water will flow into Egypt. The Blue Nile is the source of 86 per cent of the water reaching Egypt. Egyptian agriculture is totally dependent on the Nile. The country uses up annually 55.5 billion cubic metres of water. Drought-prone Ethiopia uses only a paltry 0.6 bcm of the Nile waters originating in its lands.

The rumours are proving hard to scotch because Israel is said to be involved, and because Ethiopia periodically declares that it has the right to more water. In addition, Egypt and Ethiopia have a history of tense relations. In the '70s, Egypt, under Anwar Sadat, supported Somalia in its war against Ethiopia. Then in 1979, Sadat announced a plan to divert the Nile across the Sinai desert to Israel. In retaliation, Ethiopian President Mengistu Haile Mariam declared that he would go ahead with a number of projects that would reduce the flow of the Blue Nile to Egypt. Sadat threatened military intervention.

Since then, Egypt's policy has changed. President Mubarak has been improving Egypt's relations with its African neighbours. Men-Mudarak exchavisits, and in January 1990 the Ethiopian minister of foreign affairs was dispatched to Cairo to assure the Egyptians that his country could not afford to build any projects on the Nile. Yet, not withstanding all this official goowill, water remains a sensitive Consider the events at the Nile Conference convened in London in early May. With representatives claiming that they were articulating their own rather than their governments' views, the conference provided Egypt and Ethiopia with an occasion to unofficially sound each other out on the water issue. The main Ethiopian paper called for the "integrated development of Nile Basin waters" — an enterprise which would involve coordination of the Aswan High Dam lake to Lake water requirements of the nine basin states. This means that Egypt and Sudan, currently the through evaporation. The water two major users of the river, might have to share more of their water with upstream neighbours (Ethiopia, Kenya, Uganda, Zaire, Tanzania, Rwanda and International.

On the other hand, the main Egyptian paper, delivered by Samir Ahmad, a retired diplomat and former ambassador to) Ethiopia, concentrated on emphasising the validity, according to international law, of a series of agreements signed before independence by colonial powers (Britain, Italy and Belgium) on behalf of Egypt and the upstream states. These agreements guaranteed that no dams or other hydrological projects would be constructed on the river, its sources or tributaries without the consent of Egypt. The Egyptian position is that these treaties are binding until renegotiated.

So why aren't they being renegotiated? Egypt, according to Ahmad, is not reluctant. The downstream state with the most to lose, it has been active in promoting regional cooperation through organisations like Undugu, a ministerial level grouping which aims at coordinating policies on various technical and political matters including water resources. Members are the Central African Republic and the Nilebasin states, except Ethiopia and Kenya. Ethiopia says that it does not regard Undugu as the proper forum for discussing the Nile.

Egypt, however, believes that Ethiopia has other reasons for making it difficult to reach an agreement. Said a well informed Egyptian source: "They see the Nile waters as a trump card which they do not want to play except at a price — that we help solve their political problems, the civil war (against the Eritreans) which they think that the Arab states are fuelling."

The Eritreans have used Sudan as a base for attacking the Ethiopian army. A number of other Arab states, including Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Syria and Kuwait have been rumoured to be financing the Eritrean nationalists.

Ultimately, it is to Egypt's advantage to harmonise its relations with Ethiopia. Hydrological projects in Ethiopia may prove in the long term beneficial to Egypt. If, as meteorologist suggest, it is likely that there will be less rainfall on the Blue Nile sources in the future, then it may be wise to shift over-year storage from the Tana in the Ethiopian highlands, where less water would be lost saved could be shared by Egypt, Ethiopia and Sudan, and the power generated would benefit the three states - Middle East

Badran said the government has also adopted a labour policy that reduces dependence on foreign labourers and encourages Jordanians to travel abroad, particularly to Gulf Arab states, to take new jobs. He said Jordan has already reached agreements with Sandi Arabia, Kuwait, Yemen and Libya under which Jordanians would be welcome to take jobs in these countries. The prime minister, who said the government was incapable of providing new jobs for 45,000 people each year, is planning to boost the private sector and privatise some governmental institutions. He explained that government institutions such as Royal Jordanian, which has suffered big losses over the past five years, would be left to cover their losses on their own. "The government has no resources to cover such institutions' deficits. We are committed to spending as specified in the budget. This is our policy." Responding to a question on the lessons learned from the disturbances which marred last May's demonstrations condemning a massacre of Palestinians by an Israeli gunman near Tel Aviv, the prime minister said that he feared that things, "may have gone out of control which would have meant a disaster that nobody

He explained that the three-day demonstrations "could have resulted in breaking national unity and a rift that would have taken a long time to heal... this is a time when we need to join hands and hearts."

He expressed hope that these incidents "would not recur," and warned that "if they did recur, we would not consider such disturbances as spontaneous actions, but a foreign plan aimed at undermining the security and stability of this country, and would be treated decisively, seriously and swiftly. It would be dealt with differently."

The prime minister denied claims that he had struck "a deal" with the Islamic Bloc at the Lower House of Parliament or that he was allied with the Muslim Brotherhood to guarantee support for his policies.

He explained that while he "insisted that the Islamic Bloc should join the government, it was they who refused to join and preferred to stay outside." "It makes me laugh how the Islamic Bloc accuses me of not responding to their demands while the others accuse me of responding only to the Islamic bloc," Badran said.

Moscow 'too paralysed' to make deals

By Carol Giacomo Reuter

WASHINGTON - U.S. officials report a growing feeling in Washington that the Soviet administration may be too paralysed to reach a deal on German unification.

Moscow has presented the West with a long list of conditions for accepting unification. But it is unclear if the Kremlin team could reach agreement among themselves even if the demands were met, a senior Washington official told Reuters.

"It may be that their system is simply too paralysed to conclude a bargain," he said.

This reflected a more pessimistic view of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's chances of cutting a deal with East and West Germany and the other World War II victors — the United States, France and Britain than previously expressed.

Other senior U.S. officials visiting East Berlin with Secretary of State James Baker last week stressed that the "train of German unification has left the station." and Moscow had little choice but to get aboard or be isolated.

The official who spoke to Reuters on condition he not be identified said the Bush administration "remains hopeful that the Soviet Union eventually will respond positively to the offers that have been made by the West."

These include nine assurances put forward by Baker to allay Moscow's fears about a resurgent and powerful Germany.

But the official added: "I'd say at this point it's still quite an open question.'

There are still elements of what they are proposing that are clearly unacceptable and it's not clear whether those would drop away," he said.

"If they don't drop away, you

In addition to major demands like limits on German troop levels, Shevardnadze called for a ban oin resurgence of Nazi propaganda and preservation of memorials in Germany commemorating those who died fighting Fascism.

The U.S. official said he was certain Germany would give assurances that memorials and cemeteries would be preserved. but no special guarantees should be given on banning Nazi propaganda beyond protections already in the West German con-

1,800-year- old triumphal arch restored at Jerash

By Ica Wahbeh Jordan Times Staff Writer

JERASH - Jerash, the Graeco-Roman city whose once-bustling stone-paved streets come to life again each year during the international Jerash Festival of Culture and Arts, has a nice surprise to offer its visitors this summer; it is the restored "triumphal arch" of Emperor Adrian (who reigned between 117 and 138 AD), famed for the attention he gave to developing industry, promoting letters and arts and above all known for his defensive policy and strategies.

The monument, originally built in 129 AD, later became part of a gate in the circumvallated city and is now known as the South Gate.

In a bid to conserve the precious patrimony that speaks volumes of an ancient civilisation, and in pursuit of promoting tourism, the Department of Antiquities cooperated with the French Institute of Archaeology for the Near East in the restoration work of the South Gate in the area surrounding Zens Temple. The formal unveiling of the restored gate took place Thurs-

Restoration work at the Jerash Gate started in 1987.

According to Christophe Wagner, the architect in charge of the restoration work, the base for the delicate task was a wall of two to three metres elevation with five mounds of stones. Starting from there, a titanic job faced the team of six stone cutters, two masons, three workers, one crane operator and Jordanian and French architects. The gate had crumbled and the stones were in a iumble, complicating the task of modern-day workers to restore the semblance of the original. But today, as some of the architects claim, the restored work may shame the Painstakingly and meticulously the original stones were sorted out and listed. The work, according to Wagner, involved the skills of a detective. "It was like a giant puzzle where thousands of pieces had to fit together."

Among things that helped were the stone texture and colour and the technical knowledge that stones that face the south do not age as much as those facing other cardinal points. With these few facts and lots of enthusiasm and dedication, work proceeded slowly but surely.

Seventy-four per cent of the stones used in restoration are original stones found at the site. The rest were tailored locally by adroit workers, some of whom had been in the business for a long time.

Abdallah Ismail Al Qaswa ni, a pleasant, jovial, small man past his middle age, gladly volunteered information to the Jordan Times.

With the pride of a skilled artisan and a sense of belonging to the land, he recollected "in a few minutes his past undertakings. Since 1960 Qaswani has been working with the Department of Antiquities and was part of teams that restored many Islamic castles. ## Cats, cats everywhere

<sub>4</sub> By Mimi Mann Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — This is no place for someone who doesn't They're everywhere. Pyramids have cats. Apartment stairwells have them, and offices, and hospital examination rooms. Cats prowl hotel lobbies and restaurants. Theatres have cats, and hazaars have cats.

Even the occasional airplane

It made front-page headlines: "cat forces plane back to Cairo." The story attempted to explain how a cat managed to find its way into the cockpit of an Air Sinar flight heading for the Red Sea diving centre of Sharm El Sheikh.

The cat's howls evoked "pandemonium among the 31 passengers," the article said, forcing a turnaround and emergency land-

The plane took off again only after policemen gave the cat a chance to make a quick exit.

Such capers are legendary in Egypt, where cats have a storied history. Cats were worshipped even before there were Pharaohs and remained sacred long after the Pharaohs were gone.

Egyptians long have recognised the skills of the creatures.

Among Cairo's most famous performers are the singing cats of El-Gomhouriya Theatre, where operas and other highbrow programmes are staged. The animals long ago claimed the theatre as theirs.

Hassan Kamy, Egypt's top tenor, recalled some of his less than impressive moments in opera when he was upstaged by El-Gomhouriya's home-grown comedy teams of cats.

"It was the last act of 'la boheme.' I was holding the dying Mimi in my arms. The orchestra was silenced for the finale. A cat walked on stage," Kamy said.

"At first the audience simply giggled quietly. But the cat took a long time getting across the stage, and I kept holding the dying

"Finally, the audience was in hysterics

But that wasn't the worst time. Kamy told the awful tale of two cats, another opera and a lamp: "It was a stage prop," he said. "All was fine until two cats decided to walk on stage and go to sleep at the base."

"It was act three, a love duet. You could feel the emotion in the air, the audience getting hotter. But so were the cats."

"They chose this moment to begin a romantic interlude under the lamp. The higher the diva sang, the higher they sang. ... the next day newspapers asked, which had the greater range, the soprano or the cats?" "

Cats made another artistic headline last year by disrupting an Italian group's performance at Cairo's Taliaa Theatre during an experimental theatre festival.

The action in the avant-garde play occurred on a beach, and the actors insisted that sand be spread 30 centimetres deep across the stage.

Midway through the performance, a troupe of cats wandered onto the stage. Delighted by the huge sandbox, they did what cats normally do with sand. The actors were horrified, but this time it was the audience, not the cats, who howled.

Kamy said, "what can you do?

Nobody will touch a cat. Even now, in the villages, people are scared of them, scared to harm them or anger them. Cats are sacred in Egypt."

They have been since the earliest days. A favourite goddess was the cat bastet, sleek and sensual. House cats, domesticated from wilder strains, are depicted on tomb paintings as enjoying the better things in life. Short-haired and long-legged, the tabbies were much loved in life, much mourned at death. Especially in Greek and Roman times, around 2.000 years ago, worshipers bought mummified cats to bury near bastet's sacred temples.

Embalmed and wrapped in intricate bandages, cat mummies were dedicated by the thousands. In one temple, archaeologists uncovered 300,000. Sometimes even cat fetuses were mummified, occasionally buried with a tiny mouse or ball of yarn.

Mummified or live, ancient cats never lost their special status. An official record of the time tells of an unfortunate Roman soldier in Alexandria who accidentally killed a cat. In turn, an angry mob killed him. Owning an Egyptian cat was so prestigious in antiquity that Phoenician and Greek traders and Christian monks did big busi-

OPEC in crisis as prices slide

By Nicholas Moore Reuter

LONDON - Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) is in the throes of what may prove to be its gravest crisis since the oil price crash of 1986, petroleum industry executives

Average spot prices are around $14 per barrel, down from, 21 since early January under the weight of a new glut.

the slide is blamed on the way some of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries are breaking their output quotas.

The oil ministers are now engaged in frantic bilateral talks ahead of a meeting in Geneva July 25 which, barring a hiccup in world supply, may be a last chance to boost prices.

It may also be a last chance to restore the credibility of the 13nation cartel which has its 30th anniversary next month.

OPEC's charter says its goal is stable revenues for members and some leaders like Iranian Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh say the time has come for a showdown with the rule-breakers.

"A country cannot be a member of an organisation and act against it," he said at the weekend.

OPEC, say Western industry officials, is paying the penalty for thinking that stronger demand for petroleum would enable it to muddle through 1990 without a reconciliation of members' conflicting demands for bigger quotas.

The problem goes back through last year when the United Arab Emirates (UAE), a federation of Gulf states with just 1.5 million people and annual per capita income of $16,000, insisted on selling more than the rest of OPEC would sanction. Another member, Kuwait, also failed to keep to its assigned quota, triggering violations by others. Western industry sources say reasons of prestige and commercial interest may motivate Kuwait Kuwait has its own "downstream" world refining and petrol pump network which can make money out of cheap crude oil.

It has reorganised its oil industry under the Kuwait Petroleum Corporation (KPC), now the world's 12th largest oil company. Like other commercial oil giants, KPC chafes under any curbs.

Abdul Hadi Kandeel, oil minister of non-OPEC Egypt, says he thinks the cartel may fall apart as others, like Saudi Arabia and Venezuela, follow Kuwait's lead.

gave it only a nominal quota of 1.1 million, hoping that strong demand would offset the excess.

Demand, however, faltered this year. Nor did a stopgap accord negotiated early in May do much to bring down Kuwaiti and UAE output, even when backed by veiled threats; from Saudi Arabia that it would break quota and cause: a full scale price all, Iraq says it is losing a billion dollars a year for each dollar off the price and Venezuela has been questioning the point of a quota

Trying to cool the crisis, Saudi Minister Hisham Nazer has just visited Kuwait and the UAE. The Kuwaiti and Indonesian ministers will this week see the OPEC President Algeria's Sadeq Boussena, who has said a 1986-style crash, when prices went under Hitherto it was assumed that the July 25 meeting would try to fit in Kuwait and the UAE under new quotas, but both Iraq and Iran now say the priority is quota discipline and firmer prices.

£20 billion deal with Britain for sophisticated Tornado jets and course although weak oil prices could eventually undermine the kingdom's ability to pay.

Gulf-based diplomats and oil industry sources said Saturday the deal was going well but that the price of oil, with which Saudi Arabia pays for the equipment, remained the key to the project's health.

"I can assure you that there are no problems for the time being. It is conceivbale that if oil prices stay this low for a long time there might be a problem. But we are talking about months ahead at current prices," said one source.

Spot prices of crude are running just under $4 a barrel below the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries' (OPEC) reference price of $18 a barrel and 30 per cent lower than they were at the beginning of the year.

Late last year, Saudi Arabia paid over $1 billion to British Aerospace (BAE), which produces the Tornado, to overcome a cash squeeze resulting from weak oil prices.

A report in Thursday's Financial Times newspaper in London, that the project had again hit funding problems, knocked down the shares of BAE.

But this was quickly followed by denials from BAE, and from Panavia Aircraft GMBH, the West German manager of the Anglo-German-Italian Tornado

On Saturday, the Saudi Press Agency (SPA) carried a report quoting Saudi defence ministry aide Prince Fahd Ibn Abdullah as saying the project; which includes a vast range of equipment factories, and military bases, was not in difficulty. - The sources said Prince Fahd. in London for a world ozone as head of the kingdom's meteorological department, held defence deal with British defence

Oil industry sources in the Gulf said that any changes in the oil payment structure of the Al Yamamah project would be the first real signs of any future diffipay for the deal, which includes projects continuing well nto the next century, with 400,000 barrels per day (bpd) of oil.

British Petroleum (B.P.) agreed to lift 300,000 bpd and Shell transport the balance. The proceeds from the sale of the oil were to be paid in BAE.

However, when the deal was signed in 1986 oil prices were around $28 per barrel but collapsed to lows of $10 and last year were around $18. This year, prices have slumped due to overproduction — much of it by the kingdom's neighbours the United Arab Emirates (UAE) and

King Fahd has already called on OPEC members to work for a firm production agreement to stabilise prices, something it hopes to see emerge from a July 25 OPEC meeting in Geneva.

The external current account deficit, which averaged 8.5 per cent of GDP during 1981-86 and reached a peak of 10.9 per cent of GDP in 1984, necessitated increased borrowing from private external sources at high interest rates. The rising level of external debt, combined with declining export earnings, led to an increase in the ratio of debt service to exports of goods and services from 14 per cent in 1980 to 28 per cent in 1986. By the end of 1986, gross reserves had fallen to the equivalent of five weeks of imports. The overall government budget deficit increased to five-eight per cent of

Despite a difficult external environment throughout the 1980s, characterised by sharply falling oil prices, Tunisia avoided serious

In late 1985, the government formulated policies to reduce the fiscal and external deficits through new revenue measures. expenditure restraint, and depreciation of the exchange rate. Policy problems were compounded in 1986, however, when oil prices dropped by approximately 50 per cent and a severe drought led to a two-thirds decline in cereal pro-

In the expectation that Tunisia would become a net importer of petroleum by 1991, the authorities adopted a comprehensive, long-run approach in the Seventh Development Plan (1987-91). Their top priority during the first phase of this programme was to reduce the internal and external imbalances. At the same time, the government introduced a series of structural reforms to reorient economic policies away from the heavy reliance on administrative controls and public sector involvement that had developed in the 1970s and early

Reducing imbalances

A comprehensive series of me-asures adopted in 1986 and 1987 contributed to a stunning turnaround in the balance of payments. The current account deficit fell from eight per cent of GDP in 1986 to less than one per cent in 1987 because of a decline in the investment-to-GDP ratio and an increase in the savings ratio. The latter stemmed from tightened fiscal policy and a sharp depreciation of the real effective exchange

Exogenous factors also moved in Tunisia's favour in 1987, with a recovery of agricultural production following the 1986 drought and a three per cent improvement in the terms of trade, largely as a result of a partial recovery in petroleum prices. Led by strong exports, tourism, and agricultural production, real GDP grew 5.8 per cent in 1987. Inflation was contained at 8 per cent, despite the rise in administered prices. The large decline in investment, however, aggravated unemploy-ment, which rose to about 15 per cent in 1987 from 13 per cent in administrative controls so that it can become

The real effective exchange rate depreciated by approximately 22 per cent in 1986 and by further five per cent in 1987. The export and tourism sectors responded to these improved incentives; non-energy export volume increased more than 13 per cent in 1987 and tourism receipts jumped 40 per cent in real terms. Imports also declined four per cent in volume, largely as a result of sharply lower imports of capital goods and food....

The balance of payments continued to perform well in 1988, when the current account moved to an unprecedented surplus of one per cent of GDP. Non-energy export volume grew by 12 per cent, and tourism receipts almost doubled owing, in part, to the in April 1988. Gross reserves reached the equivalent of over three months of imports. In 1989, however, the current account moved back into deficit, reflecting the return of tourism to normal levels, high food imports in the wake of a drought, and capital goods imports accompanying the recovery of foreign invest-

Tunisia's turnaround since 1986 Since 1986 is striking. After years of declining total exports and stagnant non-energy exports and service receipts, the adjust-ment measures taken by the government contributed to a growth of exports of goods and services equivalent to 14 percentage points of GDP in the three years from 1987 through 1989. Nonenergy export volume grew at an average rate of 14 per cent a year during the same period.

Tunisia's external debt situation has also been considerably alleviated in recent years. The ratio of debt service to exports of goods and services fell from 28 per cent in 1986 to 22.5 per cent in 1989, reflecting rather modest rates of debt accumulation, Making its first World Cup appearance, Ireland advanced to the quarterfinals by drawing its three first-round games against Egypt, England and the Netherlands. It then defeated Romania in a second-round penalty shootout after playing to a fourth draw.

But against Italy Saturday night, Ireland's attack had trouble kicking into gear. It only managed one or two serious threats against Italian goalkeeper Walter Zenga.

In the first 30 minutes of the game, the Irish defence conintercepting passes to break up scoring rushes. In the 25th minute, Zenga had to make a diving save on a header by striker Niall Opina.

But after Italian striker Salvatore Schillaci scored in the 38th minute, Ireland had trouble getting back into the match. The loss ended Ireland's 17-game unbeaten streak.

"We've got a great bunch of players who've got a great heart and a lot of technical ability," Charlton said. "I feel they've done as well as they were able to. Maybe they've put the Irish team on the map in the eyes of the world."

The manager, a member of England's 1966 World Cup winner, told reporters he was ready to relax a while.

"We are out of the tournament now and I'd just like to express how much we've enjoyed the whole experience," Charlton said. "Now, I want to go have a couple of pints with the lads, sing a couple of songs and catch a flight home. I'll probably be founded the Italians, repeatedly fishing Monday."

ATO summit may announce withdrawal of nuclear shells

BRUSSELS (R) — NATO leaders may announce plans to withdraw all U.S. nuclear artillery shells from Western Europe when they meet in London for a summit this week, alliance sources said Sunday.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the United States had suggested withdrawing the shells, most of which are lased in West Germany, on con-Chian that the Soviet Union completes its planned troop pullout from Eastern Europe.

"We're still discussing the proposal at NATO," said one source. "If there's agreement, there will be an announcement at the have several years to withdraw the 360,000 troops now stationed in East Germany after German unification is completed. NATO agreed in May not to modernise the nuclear artillery shells in view of the revolutionary changes in Eastern Europe and the military collapse of the Warsaw Pact.

The number of the 155mm and 203mm shells in Europe is classified, but is thought to be around 1,500. With a range of between 15 and 30 kilometres, they were intended to wipe out Soviet tanks and troops in any mass attack on the West

Several NATO countries have called for the unilateral withdrawal of the shells, including West Germany which faces a strong anti-nuclear lobby as it heads towards unification.

Bonn expects all-German elections in December and a withdrawal of the shells could help Chancellor Helmut Kohi's centre-right coalition.

The NATO summit, Thursday and Friday, will discuss how the alliance should adapt its military strategy and needs to changed times. That includes sensitive questions about the future role of nuclear weapons.

French to launch first Soviet 'instant lottery'

PARIS (AP) - French lottery

experts have announced plans to launch the Soviet Union's first "instant lottery," hoping the lure of big prizes will sell hundreds of millions of tickets for the benefit of a charity group. The lottery is scheduled to begin by the end of July, with an initial distribution of 200 million tickets, said Georges-Robert Parisot, president of the international section of the company which runs the French National Lottery. He said the tickets are to be sold in the Soviet Union by the Soviet Children's Fund, established several years ago to look after the interests of children. It is officially independent, but has close ties to the government. Parisot said in an interview that the biggest prizes in the instant lottery would be 25,000 rubles — equivalent to $42,000 at the standard exchange rate or $4,000 at the tourist exchange rate. He said the tickets will sell for five rubles apiece — $8.30cat the standard rate, or 83 cents at the tourist rate. Although the first order is for 200 million tickets. Parisot said he expected billions would be sold. He said 57 per cent of the ticket sale proceeds would be paid back in prizes, with the rest covering administrative costs and going to

NEW YORK (R) — The U.S. Justice Department has drafted new rules that would make it easier for foreigners to get asylum in the United States, the New York Times reported Sunday.

Several studies have shown that decisions on whether or not to grant asylum have in the past reflected such political biases as problems which the new rules would reduce or eliminate, the New York Times said. In 1989, 9,229 people were OAKLAND, California (R) -Nelson Mandela has ended his triumphant visit to the United States, saying that he had been "inspired beyond imagination" by the American people and announcing he would come again in October.

Departing from his prepared speech, the South African antiapartheid leader discussed that American Indians had appealed to him for support and he would visit them during his next trip, which is expected to include trips to Philadelphia and Chicago.

The 71-year-old deputy president of the African National Congress (ANC) wound up his 13-day North American visit, during which he visited eight U.S. cities, with a rousing rally at Oakland

Walesa wins battle for Solidarity power base

V. ARSAW (R) - Solidarity's Citizen's Committees voted down a proposal to turn themselves into a pro-government party Saturday after Lech Walesa warned that it could eventually lead Poland tack to dictatorship.

Walesa scored a triumph in his battle with supporters of Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki when only 10 of the 160 committee delegates from Poland's provinces voted for the Solidarity-led government's proposal. The committees have emerged as Poland's most powerful electoral machine, twice sweeping Solidarity to victory in the past rear, and Walesa said the government's plan would make them the basis for a new power monopoly. He urged the delegates to think carefully before agreeing to form a centralised federation supporting the government and speaker fer speaker joined him in choosing the proposal.

There is a danger that the ole of Solidarity will be forced one government suit," Koszyk declared.

Delegates voted instead for a - alesa proposal to meet again in three weeks to discuss the possibility of holding monthly conferences without any formal political structures.

Despite his triumph, Walesa appeared intent on averting a final split with Mazowiecki's supporters. He had urged the committees to take no final decisions Saturday or at a rival meeting called by the government camp for Sun-day. But the vote showed the committees backed him on the matter and they were thought unlikely to reverse their decision.

He said the role of the committees in strengthening Poland's fledgling democracy lay in developing political pluralism, not in the unity proposed by the government.

"When I hear people teaching me now that, more than pluralism, we need to build in unity, I can understand them but I am afraid of them," Walesa told hundreds of delegates packed into the parliament senate chamber.

"We need to create pluralistic structures today so that people who come later cannot become dictators."

Walesa denied stirring up conflict with the government because of its reluctance to accept him as president of Poland.

2 Colombians extradited to U.S.

BOGOTA (R) - Two Colombians wanted in the United States on drug trafficking charges were handed over to U.S. authorities Saturday and flown to Florida, the Colombian News Agency. Colprensa, reported.

There was no immediate confirmation from Colombia's national police or the U.S. embassy of the report.

The news agency said Luis Car-bacas Acosta and Rafael Juliao Fernandez were taken from the national penitentiary south of Bogota Saturday under heavy seculity and handed over to U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents at Bogota's El Dorado International Airport.

They were flown to a U.S. military base in Panama and then to Florida, it said.

Carbacas Acosta was to be transferred to an undisclosed location in North Carolina where he is wanted for cocaine trafficking and money laundering. Fernandez was to be put under

The hijacker surrendered shortly after midnight and the plane, carrying 152 passengers and seven crew, returned to the Soviet Union, officials at Stockholm's Arlanda airport said. "The main reason for the hijacking was that he did not want to do military service," police inspector Lennart Pettersson said. The hijacker's sole demand was to be allowed to stay in Sweden.

The hijacker, a student in Leningrad, seized control of the Tupolev 154 aircraft on an internal flight between Lvov and Leningrad by telling crew members he had a hand grenade. Police said the device turned out to be a dummy. Pettersson said it was possible the hijacker had three accomplices, as first reported by police, but they had been unwilling to carry out their mission. Because neither the hijacker nor crew spoke English, Arlanda control asked the Swedish Air Force to help. Two Viggen military aircraft intercepted the Tupolev over the Baltic Sea and escorted it to Arlanda. The incident was the sixth hijacking of an Aeroflot plane since June 9, when 17-year-old Dmitri Semyonov forced a flight to di-
